TIP FROM THE PRO

Many golfers struggle to get their fairway woods off the ground and into the air. Keeping the body and golf club level through impact will help you make a better strike and hit it higher and farther.

Aerification on Greens

The maintenance staff performed our annual fall aerification this past week (Sept. 20&21) so I wanted to reiterate the importance of it. Aerification is an essential cultural program to keeping healthy greens year round. Aerification is primarily performed to reduce the amount of organic matter in the soil. When there is too much organic matter at the top of the putting surface the greens will be soft and will hold water which will increase the chance of getting diseases. Aerification also reduces compaction, improves drainage, and increases the amount of oxygen to the roots. All of these things will help with the health of the greens during the heat of next summer. So please be patient while the greens heal over the first week of October and they will be back to normal in no time.
